THINGS TO KNOW

Syrian border towns have been the hardest hit.

Turkey pressed ahead with its offensive in northern Syria on Tuesday despite U.S. sanctions and growing calls for it to stop, while Syria's Russia-backed army moved on the key city of Manbij that was abandoned by U.S. forces in Donald Trump's retreat.

Reuters journalists accompanied Syrian government forces who entered the center of Manbij, a flashpoint where U.S. troops had previously conducted joint patrols with Turkey.

Russian and Syrian flags were flying from a building on the city outskirts, and from a convoy of military vehicles.

Russia's Interfax news agency, citing Moscow's Defense Ministry, said later that Syrian forces had taken control of an area of more than 1,000 square kilometers around Manbij. This included Tabqa military airfield, two hydroelectric power plants and several bridges across the Euphrates river, it said.

Trump's unexpected decision to withhold protection from Syria's Kurds after a phone call with Turkish President Tayyip Erdogan a week ago swiftly upended five years of U.S. policy in the Middle East.

The withdrawal gives a free hand to Washington's adversaries in the world's deadliest ongoing war, namely Syrian President Bashar al-Assad and his Russian and Iranian allies.

The United States announced on Sunday it was withdrawing its entire force of 1,000 troops from northern Syria. Its former Kurdish allies immediately forged a new alliance with Assad's government, inviting the army into towns across the breadth of their territory.

In Manbij, Syrian troops were manning joint checkpoints alongside regional Kurdish militia (YPG), witnesses said.

The United States announced on Sunday it was withdrawing its entire force of 1,000 troops from northern Syria.

Turkish-backed fighters were still 15 km north of the city. Turkey's state-owned Anadolu agency said six civilians were killed and 13 wounded in three villages near the town of Jarablus in a YPG attack launched from north of Manbij.

A Reuters cameraman on the Turkish frontier reported heavy bombardment on Tuesday morning of the Syrian border town of Ras al Ain where an SDF spokesman reported a fierce battle going on.

Trump announced a set of sanctions on Monday to punish Ankara, and on Tuesday a senior U.S. official said Washington would threaten more sanctions to persuade Turkey to reach a ceasefire and halt its offensive.

The measures announced on Monday — mainly a hike in steel tariffs and a pause in trade talks — were less robust than financial markets had anticipated, and Trump's critics derided them as too feeble to have an impact.

The Turkish lira, which had fallen on the expectation of tougher U.S. measures, recovered after the sanctions were announced, as did its bond and stock markets, with traders noting that Trump had spared Turkish banks.

Bilateral trade between Turkey and the United States is relatively small — around a tenth the size of Turkey's trade with Europe. Washington's most effective form of economic leverage would be to hinder Turkey's access to U.S. financial markets, a step Trump has so far avoided.

In a potentially more damaging blow, German carmaker Volkswagen said it was postponing a final decision on whether to build a 1 billion euro ($1.1 billion) plant in Turkey, citing concern over "current developments" after international condemnation of the incursion.

Following Trump's announcement, the U.S. Treasury said on Monday it had sanctioned Turkey's energy, defense and interior ministers, as well as the ministries of energy and defense.

Trump has defended his reversal of U.S. policy as part of a plan to extricate the United States from "endless" wars in the Middle East.

But his critics, including senior figures in his own Republican Party, cast it as a betrayal of the Kurds, loyal allies who lost thousands of fighters as the principal ground forces in Washington's battle against IS.

The Kurdish YPG militia, the key component of the forces who fought IS, is seen by Ankara as a terrorist group aligned with Kurdish separatist insurgents in Turkey.

The United Nations says 160,000 people have fled their homes as Turkish forces advance. The regional Kurdish administration puts the number of displaced at 270,000.

The U.N. Human Rights office said on Tuesday Turkey could be held responsible for war crimes by fighters under its direction. REUTERS

Actress Felicity Huffman reports to prison

2 "Desperate Housewives" star Felicity Huffman reported to a federal prison in California on Tuesday to begin serving a 14-day sentence for her role in a vast U.S. college admissions cheating scandal. The one-time Academy Award nominee, 56, turned herself in to authorities at the Federal Correctional Institution in Dublin, California, her spokesman said in a statement. U.S. District Judge Indira

Talwani had sentenced her to serve two weeks behind bars after Huffman pleaded guilty to conspiracy related to her payment of $15,000 to have someone secretly correct answers on her daughter Sophia's SAT college entrance test. "Ms. Huffman is prepared to serve the term of imprisonment Judge Talwani ordered as one part of the punishment she imposed for Ms. Huffman's actions," her spokesman said. REUTERS

Pence declines to share documents with House

3 Vice President Mike Pence declined on Tuesday to submit documents to the House of Representative committees pursuing an impeachment inquiry of President Donald Trump, his office said, calling the probe "self-proclaimed" and the requests for information too broad. Pence joins Donald Trump's personal lawyer, Rudy Giuliani, in refusing to cooperate with the investigation. Pence's counsel, Matthew Morgan, said in a letter to three Democratic lawmakers that the scope of documents requested included some "which are clearly not vice-presidential records." The White House considers the Democratic-led House's impeachment process to be unfair and without due process. REUTERS

Cuba Gooding Jr. pleads not guilty to buttock pinching

4 Actor Cuba Gooding Jr. pleaded not guilty on Tuesday to pinching a woman's buttocks in a nightclub last October, four months after he was charged with groping a woman in a separate incident. Manhattan prosecutors said Gooding pinched the woman at Manhattan's Tao nightclub after making a sexually suggestive remark to her earlier in the evening, and denied it when she confronted him. Gooding was accused in June of touching a woman's breasts at the Magic Hour Rooftop Bar in Manhattan, a charge he has denied. Both alleged incidents are part of the same criminal case. He is charged with one count of forcible touching and one count of sexual abuse, which are misdemeanors, in connection with each alleged incident. REUTERS

Asperger: the power is in the difference

Thanks to Greta Thunberg, neurodivergence, with all its prejudices, is back on the table.
LUZ LANCHEROS MWN

Environmental activist Greta Thunberg has generated multiple and passionate reactions due to her statements and actions while in the United States. But one of the most predictable (due to its lowness, of course), was emphasizing that due to her Asperger syndrome, she was not in her right mind.

Thunberg sharply answered. "When those who hate persecute you for your appearance and differences, it means they have lost their way and then you know you are winning! I have Asperger and that means that sometimes I am a little different from the norm. And, in certain circumstances, being different is a superpower," she explained on Twitter.

She also had to say that she does not hide behind it, but, as her haters showed, it still is seen as a disease. This generated a viral campaign with the hashtag #aspiepower, where it is demonstrated that having this diagnosis is not a limitation and that this gift (she was diagnosed with Asperger syndrome at 12) has allowed her to be decisive in her fight against climate change.

What is Asperger syndrome?

"The term Asperger's Syndrome entered the Psychiatry Bible (Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Illnesses, DSM-5) in 1994 and was essentially characterized by describing a deterioration in communication and qualitative social interaction, along with behaviors that were rigid, repetitive, ritual and routine. People with the syndrome do not show a delay in speech and language but some do acquire intonations and strange tones," explains Elaine Nicholson, chief and consultant to London-based Action for Asperger's Registered Charity, to Metro.

However, there are heterogeneous conditions within this same dominate early. The treatment is psychological and the person with this syndrome is taught to improve their communication and socialization skills.

Today, many of those diagnosed can develop a professional career. Asperger's is far from being a disabling disease and that is what several foundations and organizations try to prove, especially in a culture that stigmatizes neurodivergence.

"There are many beliefs that people with Asperger are all like 'Rain Man,' that they are isolated or that they educate themselves at home, that they are victims. Or that they are all super smart, like Steve Jobs and Bill Gates. But over the years, we have seen that not a single autistic individual is equal to another. They are not a homogeneous group and a category does not fit all. As in the neurologically typical population, the autistic community, of which current statistics represent 1% of the world's population, is a heterogeneous group that deserves to be understood by those with whom they have to connect through their lives: educators, employers, siblings and partners. Worldwide autism awareness is key to their future happiness," explains Elaine Nicholson to Metro. "Now, someone with Asperger will never tell you that he has a disorder," she says. "He will tell you that that is his identity."

It is also defined as a behavioral disorder that prevents communicating and socializing correctly, according to its primary diagnosis and this includes the expression of emotions and with others. Some people with the syndrome also stand out for having some higher than average skills and having specific interests that Laura Jane Grace on growing through the past of Against Me!

The band will play four of their beloved records on the road this fall.

patrick.king@metro.us

When you think of someone like Laura Jane Grace, you generally do not associate her with someone who dwells too much on the past. As the singer-songwriter and creative focal point to the long-running punk band Against Me!, Grace has written songs about being restless with the mind-numbing mediocrity of both business-as-usual rock and roll and political agendas, the complacency of those not willing to make a meaningful difference. In a more concrete and finite way, she was one of the first well-known musicians to come out as transgender in 2012.

Grace has always looked for reinvention through song, giving fans a candid peek inside what is going on internally for her at that moment. That's why it was an interesting decision to hear that Against Me! would be performing the albums, "Searching for a Former Clarity," "New Wave," "White Crosses" and "Transgender Dysphoria Blues" at a number of special two-night runs in different cities around the country this fall, playing two albums each night. I caught up with Grace over the phone to discuss the decision to play these albums in sequence on the road and their places within the history of the band.

"I have this habit — well, it's not a habit because it's kind of subconscious — where I'll usually ruminate on ideas and themes and it will take me two records to get them right," says Grace. "For me, the ideas that I was starting out with on 'Searching for a Former Clarity,' I really came to my conclusion on them with 'New Wave.' I feel like lyrically, those records are very tied together. A lot of that has to do with the reasoning to want to do those albums back to back. Then also the following night with 'White Crosses' and 'Transgender Dysphoria Blues,' they kind of feel the same way. But also between the four records, I feel there was a narrative running in like a, not to say a f—king rock opera, but I'm saying a rock opera (laughs). There's a plot running through them that I feel is interesting to look at them as a whole. 'White Crosses' and 'Transgender' feel tied together in the same way that 'Searching' and 'New Wave' did. Even in the way where you can look at the last songs on 'Searching' and 'New Wave' ['Searching for a Former Clarity' and 'The Ocean,' respectively]. Both of those songs, for me, were confessions for me with where I was at. Even if they were subconscious confessions of what I was going through internally and dealing with. I feel like I got it more right with 'New Wave' than I did with 'Searching.'

This isn't the first time the band has taken a stab at playing albums front-to-back, but none of their previous attempts were quite as ambitious as this tour. They played their classic debut "Reinventing Axl Rose" front-to-back at their hometown punk festival, The Fest, back in 2017 and did the same at Riot Fest this year with a performance of "Transgender Dysphoria Blues." But as Grace tells me, she and the band needed to take a look at this stretch of albums to see what ground they can cover on their next record. It is also worth noting that bassist Andrew Seward is back performing with the band after leaving in 2013.

"On a bigger scale, right now we're going through this period where we're working on a new album as a band," she says. "So before we move forward, let's go back through and see where we've been. It's maybe kind of a self-indulgent thing to do, but also kind of at the same time it's sort of necessary since we're about to do our eighth album. You can allow yourself a little bit of room for introspection and to reflect on where you've been and what it took you to get where you are in order to start to move forward."

Make sure to catch Against Me! playing all four of these landmark albums Tuesday, Oct. 22 and Wednesday, Oct. 23 at the Royale.

'I was looking for courageous women who broke the taboo of silence'

Director Barbara Miller talks powerful new documentary "#FEMALE PLEASURE"

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

"In a world driven by sex, it's surprising the lack of clarity there is when it comes to female pleasure."

If that opening line made you uncomfortable, that is part of the problem.

In Barbara Miller's new documentary "#FEMALE PLEASURE" the taboo nature of talking about a woman's sexuality is explored through the eyes of five fiercely brave women who have each gone through their own trials and tribulations in regards to sex.

Miller sat down with Metro to elaborate on her inspiration for directing the powerful new film and talk about what she hopes "#FEMALE PLEASURE" will ignite in society.

What first inspired you to work on and direct "#FEMALE PLEASURE?"

Working as a film director all over the world, I was always wondering how women today, in the 21st century, really feel and why it's still a huge taboo when it comes to their most intimate relationships: with themselves as women, with their own bodies and with their sexuality. For most women worldwide, sexuality still today is an obligation and not a choice or pleasure—and that's a real disaster. Searching for the reasons and roots of the discrimination against women and their sexuality, I discovered that [with] all five major world religions or world cultures, the boundaries blur more and more and demonize the female body. Women and their bodies are blamed as sinful, shameful, unworthy and as the source of all bad things that are happening in the world.

"#FEMALE PLEASURE" hits theaters Oct. 18. GETTY

These two things were the starting point for this difficult and adventurous journey to realize "#FEMALE PLEASURE."

How did you decide on/choose the women who are featured in the film?

Realizing that all five major world religions are demonizing the female body and female sexuality, I decided to search for one woman from each religion. I was looking for courageous women who broke the taboo of silence and dare to talk about female sexuality. It was important to me that these women already did the first step into the public so that they were really aware of the danger and the harsh reactions their actions could cause. That's how I came across "Unorthodox"—bestselling author Deborah Feldman, founder of the first Indian sexual education website Vithika Yadav, Somali anti-FGM activist Leyla

Hussein, former nun Doris Wagner and vagina-artist Rokudenashiko from Japan.

What were some of the most shocking bits of information you learned while filming?

Even though the film shows that major world religions have preached for thousands of years the same demonization of the female body, it's not a film about religion. "#FEMALE PLEASURE" shows the patriarchal structures and the mechanism of power that lay behind it. The misuse of religion and tradition to discriminate against half of the world's population is the real problem. It still plays a strong role in today's societies. In Japan, for example, Rokudenashiko [was arrested] for her funny, joyful vagina-art in a country where huge penises are carried through the streets for fertility celebrations.

Was there any pushback or negative feedback from either the communities you visited or anywhere else while working on "#Female Pleasure?"

It was very difficult to shoot the scene where Vithika Yadav, our Indian activist, talks to a fundamentalist guru. He was open to talk, but after a while, his followers built a circle around us and at one point we had to hurry away out of fear of being beaten up. Also, in New York, in the Hassidic community, the tension was tangible. Just a week before my camerawoman and I came for shooting some impressions, a camera team was attacked—their camera and all the material was destroyed.

Overall, what do you hope audiences take away from the film?

I hope we realize that in our modern societies—like in the U.S., in Europe and all other "secular" societies—these old mechanisms are still vivid and active. That's how we can start changing them finally. The five women are incredible positive examples, even though they went through very difficult experiences in their lives. They don't want to be seen as victims but as activists, as strong women who are fighting for a change, with high spirits and positive energy. "#FEMALE PLEASURE" hits theaters Oct. 18.

Four key Celtics for the 2019-20 season already have a strong bond.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

We saw last season with the Celtics that chemistry is still wholly important in the NBA.

Former Celtics forward Marcus Morris summed it up quite well this past February following a 123-112 loss to the Clippers in which the C's blew a 28-point lead.

"We don't have no attitude, we don't have no toughness," Morris said. "We ain't having fun. You've got guys hanging their heads. It's just not fun. I don't see joy in the game. I watch all these other teams in the league, guys jumping on the bench, jumping on the court. When I look at us I see a bunch of individuals."

Celtics boss Danny Ainge spent this past offseason making sure the script was flipped in the fun department, and you can bet that this year's Boston team will lead the league in "guys jumping on the bench"

Team USA experience should help C's

and "jumping on the court."

The C's got a head start on this new chemistry experiment this past summer when Kemba Walker, Marcus Smart, Jayson Tatum and Jaylen Brown all competed in the FIBA World Cup for Team USA. It was there that Smart, Tatum and Brown all came to appreciate Walker — who by most accounts is Tom Brady-like when it comes to leadership and selflessness.

"They love Kemba," ESPN's Brian Windhorst recently said about Tatum and Brown. "They love him. It's a double-edged thing. Jaylen Brown refused to talk about the past. He was like, 'That was then. This is now. We are artists painting a new painting.' They're saying how much they like Kemba, but it's also kind of a way of saying, 'We really didn't like Kyrie [Irving].'"

Skeptics of the Celtics' happy-go-lucky plan will point to the fact that the Celtics-led Team USA team finished just seventh in the World Cup.

International basketball, though, is a much different game than the one that is played in the NBA, as run-of-the-mill players like Patty Mills and Dennis Schroder are stars on the world stage. Carmelo Anthony

Puppy love

Who says life in the NBA isn't all puppies and rainbows? Adding to the love-fest that is the Celtics' preseason, teammates Marcus Smart and Kemba Walker welcomed new puppies to their respective families after Sunday's preseason win over the Cleveland Cavaliers. The two players were given their labradoodles at TD Garden, and the two puppies are brothers, as they have the same father.

often outshined the LeBron James and Kevin Durants of the world in international competition.

In other words, what happens overseas stays overseas.

The Celtics just want to use the personal chemistry developed between the four players in the 2019-20 season, which begins a week from Wednesday on the road against the Philadelphia 76ers.

By virtue of and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain mortgage given by Jo Ann Johnson to Aura Mortgage Advisors, LLC, dated April 15, 2011 and recorded in Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 47830, Page 121 (the "Mortgage") of which mortgage Aura Mortgage Advisors, LLC is the present holder, for breach of conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, the mortgaged premises located at 9 Brookford Street, Dorchester (Boston), MA 02125 will be sold at a Public Auction at 12:00 PM on October 29, 2019, at the mortgaged premises, more particularly described below, all and singular the premises described in said mortgage,

TO WIT:

The land and the buildings thereon locally known as 9 Brookford Street in the Dorchester Section of Boston and shown as Lot B on a plan by C. H. W. Wood Company dated May 1923, and recorded with the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 4481, Page 374, bounded and described as follows:

NORTHERLY by Brookford Street, thirty-four and 50/100 (34.50) feet;
EASTERLY by Lot A on said plan, one hundred seven and 70/100 (100.70) feet;
SOUTHERLY by Lot C on said plan, thirty-four and 50/100 (34.50) feet;
WESTERLY by Randlett Place, as shown on said plan, one hundred seven and 30/100 (100.30) feet.

Together with fee in said Randlett Place of a width of eight (8) feet, as said Lot B abuts thereon, but subject to the right in common with others entitled to pass in, through, and over the same with the benefit and easement of passage and drainage over and in said place.

For title see deed recorded with said Registry of Deeds in Book 20455, Page 83. For mortgagor's title see deed recorded with the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 20455, Page 83.

The premises will be sold subject to any and all unpaid taxes and other municipal assessments and liens, and subject to prior liens or other enforceable encumbrances of record entitled to precedence over this mortgage, and subject to and with the benefit of all easements, restrictions, reservations and conditions of record and subject to all tenancies and/or rights of parties in possession.

TERMS OF THE SALE:

Cash, cashier's or certified check in the sum of $5,000.00 as a deposit must be shown at the time and place of the sale in order to qualify as a bidder (the mortgage holder and its designee(s) are exempt from this requirement); high bidder to sign written Memorandum of Sale upon acceptance of bid; balance of purchase price payable in cash or by certified check in thirty (30) days from the date of the sale at the offices of mortgagee's attorney, Korde & Associates, P.C., 900 Chelmsford Street, Suite 3102, Lowell, MA 01851 or such other time as may be designated by mortgagee. The description for the premises contained in said mortgage shall control in the event of a typographical error in this publication.

Aries Don't jump into something without the approval of someone who will be affected by your choices. It's essential to have the support and personal guidance of someone you love and respect.

Taurus Sign on the dotted line and keep your plans moving forward. Entertain the thought of a partnership if it will help you reach your goal. Romance is on the rise.

Gemini Look for opportunities that will encourage better relationships. Trust, honesty and equality will be required if a partnership is going to go the distance. Stick to the standards you set.

Cancer If you brainstorm with people who share your vision, you will come up with a plan that will lead to a better future. Socializing or a romantic evening is favored.

Leo Be direct, know what you want and put your plan in motion. A change at home may not suit everyone you live with. Be willing to make adjustments.

Virgo If you participate in events that interest you, you will learn valuable information that could change the course of your life. An unexpected offer will lead to an exciting partnership.

Libra Keep clearing the way to freedom. Size up what you've been going through and face your feelings head-on. It's time to make room for the people and pastimes that bring you joy.

Scorpio Reconnect with old friends or family, or visit a destination you haven't been to for a long time. The memories will help you recall something that will ease your stress and enhance your outlook.

Sagittarius Concentrate on getting ahead. Channel your energy into something that will enhance your reputation, status or position. Volunteer your services to a worthy cause. Make a statement instead of being a follower.

Capricorn Put more emphasis on improving yourself and spending time with people you find mentally stimulating. The combination will ignite your imagination and set the stage for a new adventure.

Aquarius Put emotional issues in perspective. Make decisions based on what's valid and in your best interest. Don't let yourself be guilted into paying for something you cannot afford.

Pisces An unusual opportunity is waiting for you. If you mingle with people who are leaders in fields that interest you, you'll get firsthand information that will give you a head start. EUGENIA LAST
